Introduction

Portage la Prairie was one of the first European communities established in an area of central Canada that would eventually become the province of Manitoba. Its origins trace to Fort de la Reine that was established by the explorer La Verendrye around 1744 on the banks of the Assiniboine River. The site was a convenient place to carry canoes (in French, to “portage”) overland, across expansive prairie grasslands, to Lake Manitoba to the north.

Several excellent histories of Portage la Prairie have been written since the late 1800s. One of the first was Robert H. Hill’s “History of Manitoba” in 1890, followed by Reverend Alfred C. Garrioch’s “First Furrows” in 1923 and “Tread of the Pioneers” by Joseph H. Metcalfe in 1932. Most recently, Anne M. Collier’s “A History of Portage la Prairie and Surrounding District” was published in 1970 to coincide with Manitoba’s centennial celebrations.

Collier’s comprehensive book provides a wealth of information, particularly for the twentieth century which is, understandably, not addressed by the earlier books. In addition to the city of Portage la Prairie itself, the book has short sections on the surrounding communities of Belle Plain, Burnside, Delta, East Prospect, Edwin, Flee Island, Gainsborough, Genest, High Bluff, Macdonald, Oakville, and Poplar Point. It features summaries of artistic, sporting, medical, and legal activities. Written in a clear, informal style, the book is useful to anyone interested in local history and genealogy. Its only significant drawback, in my view, is that it is not well organized. (It also does not cite sources for most of its contents to help persons wishing to delve deeper into specific areas, but this is a common occurrence in local histories.) Despite having a seven-page table of contents, it has neither a subject index nor a person index. A person wishing to find all information pertinent to a particular subject or person is obligated to scan the entire book.

I created this index while compiling information on people with a connection to the Delta Marsh area, north of Portage la Prairie, many of whom are mentioned in Collier’s book. In frustration after inordinate hours spent scanning it cover-to-cover for the umpteenth person for whom I wanted information, I decided to index the book fully and ultimately save myself time. On the assumption that historians, genealogists and others might find the index useful too, I am distributing it on the Internet. Please feel free to give copies to anyone you wish so long as all pages are copied completely and no charge other than the cost of copying is made.

Creating the index proved more difficult than I had initially anticipated. It was not simply a matter of recording all names appearing in the text, the page on which they appeared, and sorting them alphabetically. In numerous cases, decisions had to be made as to how a particular name should be listed. So that readers may know the basis for my choices, and in some cases the source of my errors, the index rules are listed below. They were not rules in the absolute sense; each one was “broken,” often regularly, depending on specific circumstances.

- In some cases, spelling errors in surnames or given names were suspected but, unless the error was sufficiently blatant that it was deemed obvious, all reported spellings were included in the index. As a result, the same person may be indexed under more than one spelling.
- In most cases, the short forms of given names (e.g., Joe, Alex) were expanded and combined them with entries reported fully in the text, unless the full name was unclear. For example, Will could be short for William or Wilfred so it was left as written. Familiar forms of given names such as Bob and Jim were replaced with their more formal equivalents Robert and James, respectively, and truncated names such as Jos. and Geo. were expanded to Joseph and George, respectively. In most instances, minor spelling variations on names such as Mathew/Matthew were combined.
- Initials used instead of given names were not expanded unless the presence of two initials made it clear the entry was equivalent to another entry where given names were known. In a few cases, initials were expanded to full names when they were accompanied by a sufficiently unique surname, or they could be deduced by context or from other historical sources.

- A woman's surname was indexed as reported, with her husband's first name or initials followed by "Mrs." unless her given names were known, in which case these would prevail. Her full maiden name, if known, was added too.
- References to families (e.g., Muirs) were recorded as "Muir, Mr." on the assumption, probably correct in all but a few rare cases for the time, that the family was headed by a man with that surname. In cases where a business name appeared to be based on those of the proprietor(s), each of the proprietor surnames was added to the index, with no given names unless these were known, again under the assumption they were male.
- It should not be assumed that multiple page references for a single name represent the same person. Especially for people with common names, and for families prone to repetitious names across generations, it is probable these entries pertain to more than one person. Suffixes of Junior and Senior were deleted, and all such persons were combined, because it was unclear whether they were applied consistently in all cases throughout the book.

- Titles such as "Doctor" and "Colonel" were not used as a basis for indexing but titles were usually retained in the index.

Copies of this index are available, in Adobe Acrobat format, on the web site of the Manitoba Historical Society, located at www.mhs.mb.ca.

A final caveat is that, despite efforts to ensure accuracy and completeness, it is probable that I missed some names or introduced transcription errors. Do bring any changes to my attention at the above address or via email to webmaster@mhs.mb.ca. Updated versions will be posted on the above web site.
